THE NEW LOOK IN WASHINGTON IS THE GRACEFUL SWEEP OF MODERN ARCHITECTURE

The new Watergate apartments, to adjoin the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, rise in Foggy Bottom. When completed, the $96 million Watergate project will have five buildings—three co-operative apartments, an office building and a residential hotel. The first building, Watergate East, is scheduled for completion next summer.

This is the Pan American Health Organization's building going up at 23rd and G Streets N.W. The $4.5 million structure will have an 11-story crescent-shaped main building and a connected three-story circular council chamber. The organization is a specialized agency of the United Nations.—Star Staff Photos by Willard Volk and Paul Schnick.
